

Emma M. Greenwood

Emma M. Greenwood, Esq., of Greenwood Law Group, PLLC in New York, NY and Woodstock, NY, has focused her legal career almost exclusively on the intersection of law and technology and the integration of technology in the practice of law. She has represented defendants on dozens of federal criminal matters in the Eastern and Southern Districts of New York, most of which involved substantial e-discovery complexity. She also consults privately on e-discovery issues in criminal and civil cases in state and federal courts. Since 2011 she has served as a National Coordinating Discovery Attorney (CDA) with the Administrative Office of the United States Courts (AO), Defender Services Office (DSO) to provide direct assistance to defense lawyers nationwide on discovery management and access issues arising in federal criminal matters that involve multi-defendants and complex e-discovery. In her CDA capacity, she has been appointed by United States District Judges on scores of federal criminal cases in the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 5th, and 6th Circuits, providing tools and technology assistance to hundreds of federal criminal defense lawyers, the majority of which are members of the CJA Panel working as solo-practitioners or at small firms. Ms. Greenwood is a regular faculty contributor on CLE programs across the country on various local, state and national e-discovery topics.

In September 2014, Ms. Greenwood was among nine lawyers in the country selected and profiled as a “Legal Rebel” by the American Bar Association (ABA) for her accomplishments and continued work to provide e-discovery assistance to the federal criminal bar, including developing tools that help ensure an efficient e-discovery review process for lawyers and their clients.
